

DIGI-TALKS

Who we are

Digi-Talks consists of a group of creative and committed students from several different Danish universities. Through a wide variety of initiatives, such as hosting events and offering insights through our news feature on our website, and our social medias, we seek to create awareness about the impact of digitalization in society and business for university students.

The position

As a member of Digi-Talks, you will help creating awareness about digitization and bridge the gap between the university and the job market. You will gain experience from a number of different tasks, including settlement, development and planning of events, communication with speakers, internal coordination in an organization, and social media work.

Expectations

We expect you to be present at our status meetings 17:00-19:00 each Monday. Additionally, you will participate in various events throughout the semester. We expect you to be a team player with many ideas you wanna explore in our professional playground. You have to set aside an average of 3-5 hours per week for your efforts, Monday included, although it fluctuates greatly depending on the frequency of events during a given period. We expect that you can volunteer for a minimum of one semester and that you are a student at a Danish university in the greater Copenhagen area.

What we offer

We offer a fun and creative volunteer job where you can combine your interest in digitalization and technology with event coordination. On top of that, we will provide you with the tools to inform and enlighten students about the future society and job market, ultimately giving you the chance to shape and empower the university students of today and tomorrow. Thus, becoming a member of Digi-Talks will give you a unique experience across different universities, that can not be obtained anywhere else.
